Speaking of the middle ranks of life, a good writer observes-"There we behold woman in all her glory: not a doll to earry silks and jewers. nor a poppel to be flattered by profane adaration, reverenced to-day, disearded to-morrow; always jostled out of the place which nature and society would assign her, by sensuality, or by contempt; admired, but not respected; desired, b not esteemed; ruling by passion, not by affectation; imparting her weakness, not her constancy, to the sex she would exalt; the source and mirror of vanity. We her as a wife, partaking the cares at cheering the auxiety of a husband, dividing his toils by her domestic diligence; spreading cheerfulness around her; for his sake sharing the decent refinements of the world, without being vain of them; placing all her joys and happiness in the man she loves. The author violates in almost every sentence, some propriety or other of the English language; uses generally a flat, slovenly idiom; and indeed seems to be ignorant of the fitst rules of syntax. This Life of Auron Burr, so called, might, in south, bestyled poly-biography, for a biographical Stetch is interpolated, of every man of note vho could be mentioned. If we had ro in for the purpose, we would cite some luderous examples of the Pangloss method here pursued. But at present, we must confine ourselves to the main chemie-which is, not only to exculpate Burr, but to gorify himto represent him as one of the principal worthies of our Revolution, as a transeendant statesman and immaculate patriot. Mr. Knapp has discovered (see his Introduction) that Mark Antony was calumulated, and "with all his profligacy had a noble nature;"--and so Colonel Burr has been the victim of jealousy and prejudice, and ought to be esteemed, admired and pitied by all his countrymen! The character and conduct of Antony, however, are as unequivocal, and exhibited to us as justly and authoritatively, as those of any ancient; and the former qualities, proceedings, designs and habits of Burr are equally authenticated. Cicero, though he employed rhetorical exaggeration, will be credited in the main respecting the profligate ise of the Republic, who finally caused the orater to be assassinated, and proved his own "noble nature," by nailing the head and hands of the illustrious champion of freedom on the rostra, where, as Plutarch says, "the Roman people thought they aid not so much see in the dreadful spectacle, the face of Cicero, as a picture of Anthony's sout." Thus, Mr. Jellerson's exposition of Burr's acts and plans will continue to be admitted history, whatever motives may be ascribed to the accuser, and whatever bold denials or artful glosses attempted. The evidence extant is exuberant and irresistible; we refer to his trial and the messages and correspondence of Mr. Jefferson, and we udd iliat we have heard ample and complete confirmation from the mouths of contemporaries who possessed direct knowledge. -It would not be difficult to prove that the lights in which Mr. Knapp has endeavored to place Burr's rivalry and duel with General Hamilton, and his recepers, when educated, make the best wives tion and conduct during his exile abroad (not voluntary in a moral sense,) are utcerly false. This may be shown on another occasion. Our present purpose is to indicate merely the spurious character of this production—a patchery which we should have abstained from nocominus upon it the very reverse of fact,

> From the Richmood Enquirer, THE POST OFFICE.

The Lynchburgh Virginian ages the Richmond Whig, in shouting against the increased expenditures of the General Post Offico. It states by way of burlesque on the "retrenchment and economy" of the day, that "in the whole four years of Mr. Adams' Administration, extra Clerk hire in the Post Office Department cost $16,000-in one, of General Jackson's Administration, il exceeded $38,000!! Admit that it was so-are we, therefore, to presume the waste and extravagance which these Whig gentlemen are assuming? They ought to be aware, that there has been an immense increase in the operations of the Post Office, since the present Administration came into powor. Major Barry, in his last letter to the House of Representatives, states that More than three-fourths of the improvements made in the transportation of the mail since the undersigned came into the department, have been done much bolow the pro rate expense; and the average expense of transportation is less than at any former period. complaint had been made as the above, about the increased clerk hire. But, meeting a fow days past with an intelligent agent of the Post Office Department in this city, we asked him about the number of clerks employed in the Office. He mentioned how many there were—and added most emphatically, "and yet I assure you, sir, that we have not now enough to transact the business of the Whig Senators contributed to pass a bill through their body at the last session, multiplying the offices in the Department -creating higher officers, as Auditor,

The idea of using their old enemy, the Postmaster General, to divide the democratic party, spread among the federal editors with astonishing rapidity—and it was really amusing to see what a wonderful effect this intelligence, vague and uncertain as it was, had upon the leaders culty. of the opposition. For a short time all their ingenuity was employed to screen Major Barry from the censure and abuse they had previously been heaping upon him and his department. "He was less to blame than they had supposed-it was the rascally clerks and subordinates who had done the mischief-the major himself was a pretly good sort of an officer after They were quite willing to pardon all his sins if he would but assist them to divide the democratic party, and thus contribute to the advancement of their own selfish views. And the hope of dividing the domocratic party by flattering the friends of Judge White having failed, the federal editors. unwilling to lose so frightful a theme of denunciation as the Post Office Department without an equivalent, have again returned to their old trade of abusing its head. We have therefore coucluded to publish the letter. "HAVRE, March 13th, 1835. "Deer Sir: I have just scrawled a few lines to go this meening; there are two packets in port. "I have just returned from Paris where I spent ten days with a sick friend. I had an opportunity of seeing and conversing with many Deputies on oor affairs, who were all of opinion that the law ould pass, no matter who comes into the cabinet. I conversed with Dubois, Secretary to the Com mission, who told me that their report was ready that they had found twenty-seven nillions that would not be contested in any tricunal in the world; that there was, besides what they had call ed a floating demand to a large amount, that the Commission would report unanimously in

"The Ministers remain as they were, with the exception of Mr. de Rigney being traussered to the Var Department, and Mr. de Bioglie appointed Minister of Foreign Affaire and President of the Council. This arrangement is very savorable to the American question, and the report of the committee will be made in a few days, and we have no doubt that the law will be voted by a large majority."

It will be remembered that this commission, which reports "unanimously in faror of the 25 millions," was appointed in consequence of the views taken of this subject in the President's message. Mr. Ciay's report, which reached Paris after the appointment of the commission, and unjust impression, that Mr. Rives had boasted the treaty stipulated for more than our claimants are entitled to, we are glad to see has failed of its object. The French Deputies, as was shown in Mr. Jay's letter, interpret Mr. Rives's correspondence with much more candor than his envious rival of the American Senate. The quotations from Mr. Rives' letters, which Mr. Clay forced into his service, are not understood by the French commission to authorize the unfounded inference of his (Mr. Clay's) report, that a concession was made by the American Minister that 25,000,000 was too much—and so this pretext, held forth by Mr. Clay to the French Government to give countenance to a second refusal of the indemnty, which he promised should not be follow Nothing new on the subject of the In- been treated by France as it deserved,-

CONSTITUTION WATER, STRANGUARY, GRAVEL & STONE.

THERE are perhaps no diseases so afflicting to the patient, or so perplexing to the Physician as affections of the urinary organs. In many cases, after years of misery and pain, the only al-ternative is a severe and dangerous operation, in which the chances of failure oftentimes more than ounterhalance the chances of success; any reoredy therefore, which promises in all cases material relief, and in most perfect cure - having also respectable vouchers fur its efficacy, is worthy of attention and trial. Such a remedy is offered to the puhlie in the celebrated Constitution Water, which, having been in use in England, has afforded to the privile daily evidence of its successfully effecting all the purposes for which it is intended, and of possessing properties which render it invaluable in all cases of urmary disease.—Also a very general assortment of Medicines, Paous, Glass-ware and Instruments, &c. for sale at his Iring & the best naterials, and warranted well made.
